

ALEXANDRIA.

SATURDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 21.

Mary Harris, the young woman, who shot Burroughs, her former lover, in Washington, and was afterwards acquitted on the ground of insanity, is, from the report of Dr. Nichols to the "Association of Medical Superintendents of American Institutions for the Insane," now an inmate of the Insane Asylum, and although improved in health, exhibits at intervals, and under certain circumstances, marks of temporary insanity.

The N. Y. Herald tells its readers that it is easy to foresee the results of the violence and folly of Congress, in forcing upon the country a policy entirely foreign to our "institutions, and in conflict with all our ideas of freedom, justice and generosity." Whether this as the Herald now says, will unite the people of the country upon the Conservative candidate for President, remains to be seen. We hope for the best.

Information is desired of Geo. W. Fairfax, (or his heirs,) who became owner some twenty years ago of a large tract of now valuable land, then in Bath (now Highland county) Va., which has been sold for taxes, and the purchaser is about to perfect his title, unless the owner or his heirs come forward. Geo. W. Fairfax resided in Frederick county for several years. Address J. M. Sney, at Monterey, Highland county, Va.

We think that the new Christmas story, by Dickens and Wilkie Collins, bears more of the marks of the latter than the former writer. These literary partnerships seldom succeed—Beaumont and Fletcher were exceptions to the general rule—but they lived in "the good old times." The Christmas story, however, of which we speak, has some well drawn characters, and good descriptions.

The Washington Chronicle is perfectly "furious" at the President for sending in the Message to Congress about Gen. Hancock. It considers the Message as an "outrage" upon Congress, upon Gen. Grant, and everybody else; and its tone "taunting and defiant."—Impress him! A "taunting and defiant" tone, would make a capital charge! We submit the case to Ashley!

As the President did not send to Congress, yesterday, before its adjournment, his message vetoing the bill striking out the word "white" from the laws of the District of Columbia, the bill fails to become a law, the ten days allowed to consider a bill, not having expired until today. Congress will pass the bill again, no doubt, as soon as it re-assembles.

The Richmond Examiner contains a letter from an English farmer, who writes to it to learn if he can buy a farm large enough to "provide him with a reasonable living" in Virginia, for five hundred pounds. The Examiner says he can, and so can any number of his countrymen who may feel the desire to settle in that State.

It is said that the Grant meeting at Faneuil Hall in Boston, was not a very successful one, in any respect.

The Anti-Slavery Standard declares that "the Radical party is falling to pieces." We hope so.

Congress adjourned yesterday, to meet again on the 6th of January.

Mrs. John W. Keyes, formerly editor of the Circleville Ohio, Democrat, died in the insane asylum at Columbus on the 25th ult. The Crisis of the latter city thus chronicles the sad event.

"Mr. Keyes was the editor of an independent newspaper, which, during the late war, defended liberty with fearless manhood. For this he was dragged off to prison and treated so brutally that reason tottered from her throne, and he became a raving maniac. All efforts to restore him failed, he sank down in childish imbecility into the grave. His family, left disconsolate and broken-hearted, are crushed."

The Mysterious Disappearance.

[Wash. Cor. N. Y. Tribune, December 19.]

Colonel Parker has been found. His explanation of his recent mysterious disappearance upon the eve of his marriage will not be without interest to your readers. It is this. He was to have been married on Tuesday morning. On the Saturday evening previous he called at Gen. Grant's residence and borrowed a military scarf. He was down alone a while afterward, and then went off alone to take a walk. In the course of it he met an Indian of the Six Nations, of which confederation Col. Parker is chief. The Indian took him to a room, gave him a glass of wine, and sat down to converse upon the important business which he wished to see him about. In a short time Col. Parker began to feel drowsy, and concluded he would lie down on the bed a moment. He did so, and fell into a deep sleep. When he awoke, it seemed very late at night, but whether it was the same night or another he could not tell. The Indian was sitting by the bedside gravely and patiently. Colonel Parker asked a few questions natural to the circumstances of the case, and the Indian said: "You have been very sick. Here is some medicine the doctor left for you." The patient took the medicine left alone again, slept comfortably until Wednesday morning, and then woke up, a matter of twenty-four hours too late for the wedding. The Indian was gone. Colonel Parker's friends think the Six Nations are opposed to his marrying a white lady, and that they sent an envoy to take care that the wedding should not take place, or to even deprive him of his life. A bride chosen for him from among his subjects, the Six Nations, stands ready to marry him, and the tribes prefer that he should take her, and remain more closely allied to his people than he would be if he took a wife from another race. Colonel Parker's statement I have given without addition or embellishment. General Grant has taken entire charge of the matter now, both because the interrupted wedding had been appointed to come off under his auspices, and because Colonel Parker belongs on his staff. He will institute a strict investigation of the affair to the end that Col. Parker may establish his blamelessness if he can, or suffer dismissal and disgrace if he fails.

Congress.

Yesterday a bill was passed directing the suspension of all payments for work on the jail now being built in the District of Columbia, until additional action shall be taken by Congress. A long debate took place on the bill exempting cotton raised after the year 1867 from the internal revenue tax, but no action was taken. A short Executive session was then held, and at its close the Senate adjourned until Monday, January 6th, 1868.

In the House of Representatives a resolution similar to that passed by the Senate, prohibiting any additional payments from being made for work done on the new jail in the District, was adopted, in order to allow an investigation to be made in relation to alleged frauds in the letting of the contract. The deficiency Appropriation bill, with the Senate amendments thereto, was taken up, and after a long discussion the amendments were not concurred in, and the bill, as amended, was passed. The House soon after adjourned until Monday, January 6th, 1868.

The Lynchburg papers call one of the delegates from that city to the convention, "Violent Williamson." Some allusion to a cow is intended to be conveyed. We do not know what the story is. Perhaps the member may call for an investigating committee?

"THEATRICAL."—Yesterday a colored man applied at the box office of the National Theatre for tickets for two reserved seats in the dress circle at the performance last evening, and it being customary for colored men to be sent for tickets, they were sold to him without hesitation. Last night two colored men, said to be brothers, named Wallace, presented tickets to the door-keeper, which he hurriedly took without looking at them, and the men passed into the parquette circle and took seats. Very soon considerable excitement was manifested, and some cries were heard of "niggers in the pit—put 'em out." Officers of the house went to the men and informed them that they were in the wrong part of the theatre; that there were seats especially for the accommodation of colored people in the upper gallery. They said that they had paid for seats where they were, and refused to leave. The excitement continued until the close of the third act of the play (Forrest as Metamora,) when some threats were made, and the attaches of the theatre, fearing trouble, again attempted to induce the men to leave. Finally they offered to go if their money was refunded to them. This was done at once, and they left the theatre.—Wash. Star.

FATTENING POULTRY.—The poultry yard is a source of profit to the farmer, which is greatly lessened or increased according to the skill and care with which the business is managed. One branch in which much improvement may be made by most farmers, is that of fattening the poultry for market after it is nearly or quite grown. The coop to keep them in should be made to hold one dozen, and its size is as follows: Length three feet, width two, height two and a half. The sides and ends are composed of bars placed three inches apart, and the bottom of round poles. It is elevated about two feet from the ground by means of legs. The feeding troughs are a long the sides on the outside. The coop should be placed in a barn or some place sheltered from storm and wind, and if slightly darkened so much the better. By judicious feeding fowl can be thoroughly fattened in twenty days.—Moore's Rural New Yorker.
